

THE EVER CHANGING WORLD OF WIRELESS

By Brian Zarzycki, MP Integrated Solutions

Since 2007, the world of wireless technology has been turned upside down with the release of the iPhone on the AT&T network. It was one of the most sophisticated mobile phones that anyone has ever had the chance to use. An individual could make phone calls and browse the Internet at the same time. As the phone advanced, it had the ability to make phone calls, browse the Internet, send out emails and play video games.

What are you looking for in wireless technology? Do you need to have download speeds of 20Mb/s while you are out of the office? Does your phone need to be able to make phone calls and send emails at the same time? Have you thought about your needs of working outside of the office? Who are you using for wireless technology – Verizon, Sprint, AT&T, or T-Mobile?

The 2011 Consumer Electronics Show is over and produced many technologies that are going to be game changers. There will be new Android tablets running a brand new Google Operating System. Google also is producing a new Netbook running Google Chrome OS. HP, Dell and many more manufactures are producing technologies that will change how consumers communicate and how businesses use the new technology to run their business. When will Apple announce iPad 2, is there going to be an iPad 2? Will it be as popular as the first iPad?

Apple, on the 11th of January, formally announced their partnership with Verizon. Verizon will now sell the iPhone 4 to all customers starting February 3rd and the rest of the world on February 10th. How will this impact your business or your personal life? The iPhone changed the world in 2007. Now one of the most popular mobile wireless phones will be running on one of the world's most popular wireless networks. Will this help other wireless companies or will this hurt them? Only time will tell us.
